USPA NEWS - Beauty and Personal Care could be the today's big Online Category but only if Products and Online Shops meet the Needs of Consumers in different Segments and Countries. One would think that the desire to see, touch, and try Beauty Products means Shoppers will continue to prefer In-store Purchases, but recent advances in Online Fashion Sales are setting a precedent that benefits Online Beauty Sales.

Beauty and Personal Care could be the today's big Online Category but only if Products and Online Shops meet the Needs of Consumers in different Segments and Countries. One would think that the desire to see, touch, and try Beauty Products means Shoppers will continue to prefer In-store Purchases, but recent advances in Online Fashion Sales are setting a precedent that benefits Online Beauty Sales. It offers Opportunity for Innovation and Differentiation. Shoppers are not only interested in Price and Promotions, they are also interested in : Purchasing their regularly used Products Online, Convenience, Inspiration for New Makeover and beauty Ideas....

There is a clear Opportunity for Retailers and Brand Owners with their Own Online Presence to differentiate their offerings, using : In-store Digital Tryouts, or Pop-up Stores, with the option to purchase Products Online ; Apps with Facial Recognition or Skin-tone Tests to recommend Products ; Beauty Communities (consumer discussion boards and offers of expert advice) ; Consumer Product Reviews with Photos that show Product Results... Overall, providing a Digital Touch and Feel is more than an Opportunity for Differentiation, it is also a Way to increase Online Penetration of the Category.
