USPA NEWS - The Théâtre Impérial de Compiègne is a Theater in Compiègne (France). The Emperor Napoleon III decided to construct a Theater in Compiègne to entertain his court in 1867. He chose the Location and the Architect of the Building. In 1991, a Restoration Program and the Collection of Funds were launched to restore the Building and make it a Mecca for the Operatic Stage. The Quality of the Acoustics of the Room comes from its Design, built in the Italian Style, and 90% Wood. With the Support of the Sound Insulation of the Stage House and the Transfer and Amplification of Sound through the Wood, the Reverberation gives the Room excellent Acoustic Qualities... Heads of Renowned Orchestra have recognized the Qualities of the Room.
