For the Opening 65 Shops have opened to the Public. In July 2018, 80 Signatories have opened their Doors.

Gianni Ranaulo, the Italian Architect and Designer behind The Village has an Office in Dubai and another in Los Angeles. After Several Projects in the United Arab Emirates and in France, he has collaborated on Numerous Occasions with The Phalsbourg Company (Waves in Metz, the Company Headquarters in Place Vendôme). His Work seeks to free itself from the Norm and focuses essentially on "Light Architecture", a Synthesis between Physical and Virtual Worlds. For The Village, which is built on the Site of an Old Gravel Quarry, he imagined an Architecture inspired by Traditional French Villages.

As a Result, the Village wall is over 3 metres high and made of Black Cast Concrete that echoes Stone. This Delineation, which contrasts with the Bright Green of the Landscaped Surroundings and the Sparkling White of the Buildings in the Heart of the Village, creates a Striking Contrast and better marks the Entrance to the Site. Inside the Village, in the Central Hamlet, 78 Buildings employ a Timber Construction almost 6 metres high, with pitched Roofs, similar to those of Mountain Chalets. Walls about this Wooden Structure along with Facades in White Screen-Printed Glass. None of these Buildings is Identical. And this Worldwide first required a year of Research and Development because of the Different Types of Materials. As for the Landscaping, designed by Landscape Architect Paul Arène, all the Roofs have been planted in 80cm to 1.20m of Soil and the Silo Parking, which rises over 4 Floors, is concealed by a Row of very tall Birches. 750 Mature Trees, each already over 10 years old, have been planted, and 460,000 Plants and Shrubs complete the Landscaping.
