Known for protecting, a few local Law Enforcement Officers now intend to thrill audiences when they present the World Premiere of the Sci-Fi film they wrote and produced, called 'Shadowglade'. The film about a small Florida town police department infiltrated by vampires and werewolves debuts 9:15 PM Friday the 13th of November at the Sunrise Civic Center, in what portends to be the most suspenseful part of the Fort Lauderdale International Film Festival.

According to Gregory Von Hausch, the film festival's president, 'this film shows that besides bravery, police officers can have a creative side, manifest in this Sci-Fi adventure film they've produced, which we're pleased to present.'

Ethan, Alex and Erica are not simply a Vampire, Werewolf and Witch respectively, they are also Cops; Shadowglade's finest! Verini and Danny Klapadoras wrote and produced the 40-minute pilot presentation about cops coping with surreal circumstances as they attempt to deliver justice within a small Florida town.

Although its characters have supernatural powers, Shadowglade is a thriller grounded in realistic police procedure, said the film's production manager, Anthony Galizia. It follows the thrilling adventure of three police detectives, all of whom have supernatural roots as they investigate crimes both normal and paranormal, while dealing with their own hidden, often quirky existences.
